For more than 20 years, Zach has developed software and evolved technology for companies, maximizing efficiency and minimizing costs. As Chief Technology Officer, Zach is instrumental in the architecture and infrastructure of technical operations by leading data services, information technology, and software development.

Since Simpluris' inception, Zach has spearheaded a technology-driven vision for settlement administration. He envisioned a single digital platform, purpose-built to serve the legal administration industry. Today, Zach has realized this vision and continues to innovate as an evolving industry calls for new solutions. Zach leads all technology solution planning and implementation for clients and the organization.

By overseeing all systems, networks, software, hardware, applications, infrastructure, security, and related disciplines which support the organization's daily operations, Zach ensures Simpluris maintains a level of competitive advantage through its utilization of custom in-house developed software solutions and leveraging best of breed technologies in a unique way which best serves our internal and external clients. Therefore, safeguarding Simpluris and its customers by maintaining high degrees of security and compliance to mitigate and limit risk to its data and information assets.
